Essen Health Care is an integrated healthcare delivery organization that provides high quality, compassionate, and accessible medical care to many of the most under-served residents of New York State. Guided by a population health model of care delivery, Essen's patient-centric approach is focused on meeting patient needs in all care settings.

Founded in 1999, Essen clinicians provide care in all five boroughs of New York City. With 150 primary and specialty care physicians and almost 100 advanced clinicians, Essen Health Care is one of the largest, most comprehensive private medical groups in New York City, and is recognized for excellence in patient satisfaction and clinical care.

With five clinical divisions, patient care is provided in medical offices, 16 urgent care centers, hospitals, and nursing homes, as well as directly to patients in their homes. The Care

Management division cares for the community by addressing social determinants of health through RNs, care managers and care coordinators.

Essen clinicians provide quality care for nearly 30,000 patient lives across our five clinical divisions. Essen was one of the initial practices to have achieved 'Level 3 Patient Centered Medical Home' designation in New York by the National Committee for Quality Assurance. In 2018, EHC was nominated for the Heritage Innovation Award. Essen continues to expand and grow in the five boroughs while extending its breadth of services and continuing to provide the communities with leading edge care.

Essen is growing and have immediate openings for Physician Assistants for our Urgent Care and Outpatient office locations in the Bronx, NY area. If you are committed to delivering quality medical care, we want to hear from you! Interviews taking place right now for our brand new state of the art Urgent Care Centers
